

When looking at emerging industries, investors should be cautious of the hype. Identifying winning sectors in emerging industries is a crap shoot, especially for those who are looking to sustain a long-term portfolio. The best way to approach investments is to diversify broadly across industries, as well as throughout the global markets.