

Minimizing investment transactions and expenses and not attempting to outsmart the markets via market timing or stock picking are hallmarks of successful, evidence-based investing. In this brief, three-minute video, another respected academic explains in simple terms why this is so important. Enjoy, and as always, feel free to pass it on to your family and friends.