

While advising and guiding thousands of families over my 30+ years as a financial advisor, one thing I have consistently observed is how the proper utilization of money truly can add significant happiness and fulfillment to one's life. However, such happiness isn't found in accumulating possessions whose newness and excitement quickly fades away. Please listen carefully to what is conveyed in this brief video blog and take to heart the substantive message.